

Write Monkey

Write Monkey is a text editor that offers several unique features to stand out of the masses of other writers and editors. The first and probably most noticeable feature is the full screen mode which displays a black screen without any text editing buttons and toolbars except for the main menu bar. The light green text is perfectly readable on the background. A right-click in the interface will open a menu that lists all the available options that are at the writer's disposal including switching between full and window mode, switching between text and repository or enabling so called jumps.

Jumps display bookmarks, paragraphs and headings of the text in a separate always on top window which makes it convenient and comfortable to navigate the text. The colors and pretty much any design parameter can be changed in the program's option to allow the user to select his own fonts, colors and page layout.

INSTALATION: If you are running XP, make sure that Microsoft .NET framework 3.5 (or higher) is installed on your computer. If not, download and install it. If you are running Vista or Windows 7, the framework is already there

To install, click on the link to open the folder then unzip all files and directories from wm0971.zip (if they are not already visible) and put them in any folder on your hard drive. Run WriteMonkey.exe file from that folder and that's it.

This program has not been previewed, but is getting good reviews.
